Investment strategy

The fund selects undervalued companies from around the world, including emerging markets, with attractive risk-reward for long-term investors. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon. Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. Since the fund is actively managed, the portfolio will deviate from the composition of the benchmark.

Q2 commentary, June 2025

After dipping sharply early in the second quarter in conjunction with President Trump's announced "Liberation Day", the global equity market roared back with full force and ended the period at all-time-high levels as tariff fears subsided. In the US, the S&P 500 index posted its best quarter since December 2023. Europe and Japan also recorded strong quarters for equity returns. As did emerging markets. France was the notable exception in Europe seeing capital outflows. Regarding foreign exchange rates, the US dollar continued to weaken. The dollar index has fallen by 10.8% so far in 2025 - the biggest first-half loss since 1973. Cryptocurrency and stablecoin continued to garner attention in the financial press, with Ghana becoming the latest African country to draft an official regulatory framework for digital assets that are growing fast in Africa. Bond yields were relatively stable in the second quarter.

SKAGEN Global underperformed its benchmark index in the second quarter. The fund gave back some of its outperformance from earlier in the year but remains well ahead of its index YTD as of 30 June. The fund's top three contributors to absolute return were Microsoft, DSV and JP Morgan. In the case of Microsoft, in early 2024, the fund had scaled back its position significantly for valuation reasons. As the stock pulled back with Trump's tariffs announcements, we found valuation to be compelling again and increased the weight of the position. The stock has since rebounded strongly. The Danish logistics firm DSV also recovered well from depressed levels as cyclical names powered the market rally. Finally, the banking giant JP Morgan performed well and passed the Federal Reserve's annual stress test with flying colours, paving the way for significant future capital returns through dividends and major buyback programs. The three worst contributors were Brown & Brown, Marsh & McLennan and Waste Connections. These three names have a defensive profile and typically lag the market in times of optimism. There is no notable company-specific news about any of them.

Regarding portfolio changes, SKAGEN Global did not initiate or exit any positions in the quarter. However, as noted above, we added to Microsoft during the market pullback. We also took advantage of the lower stock price to increase the weight of our Italian ultra luxury company Brunello Cucinelli, the Dutch life insurer Aegon and the US tech giant Amazon. In a similar vein, we took profit in Brown & Brown, Intercontinental Exchange (ICE) and DSV after strong share price performance.

The SKAGEN Global team travelled to Italy for a site visit of Brunello Cucinelli. We came away highly impressed with the operations. The company strives to build an ecosystem where customers, employees, communities and owners benefit from the successful business. While many companies share this aspiration on paper, we rarely see it put into practice with the same enthusiasm and dedication as witnessed here. With a market cap of around EUR 7 billion, the runway for Brunello Cucinelli is long and we envision it as a core portfolio holding for many years to come.

With US tariffs gradually scaled back and US military deterrence increased after the strike in Iran, many financial markets are back at peak levels and optimism is rising. In light of the strong market recovery, the portfolio valuation currently looks moderately attractive. We stay vigilant and remain disciplined on valuation for existing and potential portfolio holdings.
